REVISE TARIFF

Solution Offered by Large Industrial Interests.

NOT BY POLITICAL PARTIES

Plan is to Have it Adjusted Now by the Business Interests and Have the Tariff Controlled by a Commission Which Will be Non-Partisan.

NEW YORK, August 28.-The Naional Association of Manufacturers, an organization of some 27,000 prominent manufacturers with a combined capitalization exceeding $15,000,000,000, publishes in the current issue of its official organ. American Industries, a tariff 'creed' emphasizing the resolution in favor of immediate tariff revision unanimously passed at a recent convention. The association holds that present tariff schedules are unequal and demands the immediate appointment by Congress and the executive of a non-partisan, nonpolitical commission composed of men thoroughly competent to equalize present schedules This demand by the very class of interests served by the tariff is extremely significant, and the agita-tion undoubtedly will lead to a tariff debate. The "creed" outlined by the manufacturers' association is as fol-

"We believe in the policy of a protec tive tariff, liberal in scope and affording to every American industry in need of protection from foreign competition the benefit of schedules ample to accomplish this purpose, including a suf-ficient margin of safety to insure the steady and profitable operation of industrial plants and the payment of a wage scale compatible with the present standard of living in our country.

"We believe that our present tariff, n many of its schedules, is unjust and unequal, giving to some a smaller measure to protection than is needed, and to others greater industrial advantages that are equitable, resulting in abuse and in a social unrest disturbing to Dunlap Opening Day To Be An Event In Capital stock paid in $100,000,00 the body polities.

"We believe that any further revison of the tariff under the old methods is wholly to be discouraged and avoided, since it is by these methods that the present injustices have arisen, popular mimosity engendered toward a class because of undue advantages of a few, and because such so-called revision of the tariff has invariably resulted in a rigidity of the set schedules and a consequent discouragement of foreign trade.

"We believe that the tariff should be taken out of politics once for all, treated as a business proposition, made just to all parties thereto—the people of the United States as a whole-placed upon a sane and scientific basis, in hands competent to treat it intelligently, without favoritism and thor- fied by his company that they have set oughly to accomplish the purpose of Thursday, August 29, as "Dunlap Day" protection without injustice.

"We believe that the time to take the tariff out of politics is now and not after red letter one. "We believe in placing the tariff under a non-partisan tariff commission not unlike the present Interstate Commerce Commission with semi-judicial powers, as for example to summon witnesses, this commission to investigate thoroughly and scientifically the various schedules and from time to time submit their conclusions in the form of recommendations to Congress and the executive. It should lie within the power of this commission and the executive to increase or decrease the present schedules within such minimum or maximum limits as Congress in its wisdom may determine to the end that an equitable adjustment be made. Not as the result of a few months' work of a Congressional committee, but of the careful and systematic work of a permanent and practical commercial body.

"We believe that Congress at its next session should pass a bill duly creating the tariff commission just described, and that it remains for us, the manufacturers and representatives of the industries of the United States, for whom and in whose interests the present tariff schedules were presumably created, to express our strong desire for a tariff commission as above outlined, and to demand that Congress create such a commission at its next session.

Marsh Cup Water Plant. The plant that I found in the Hudson bay region which is most worthy of notice grows in the mossy muskegs, in places where there is little or no grass. It is remarkable for two reasons-the beauty of its flower and its water containing properties. The leaves, which grow flat upon the ground, are broad and green. The belf of the flower seems adapted as a nat ural reservoir for water, of which from a large one, there can easily be obtained as anch as an Egyptian coffee cup will hold. But the beauty of it was that in the early autumn, when the nights were frosty, but the heat regarding rates, etc. still excessive by day, the water it contained was always iced, for these charming flower bells are evidently constructed to resist frost, and as they close in toward the top they protect from the rays of the sun the lump of clear ice formed within the calyx at night. The result of this was that often when tolling along at midday, hot and weary, through a stagnant swamp all I had to do to slake my thirst was to pluck a few of these miraculous flowers to obtain so many small cups full of delicious water. on the top.-Blackwood's Magazine.

What Boys Learned 300 Years Age. Schoolboys in old England took to Latin and Greek at an early age. At St. Saviour's Grammar school, Southwark, in 1611 a pupil of seven years and three months was admitted as an ordinary occurrence, who signed his form of admission, stating himself to be "reading and learning in the Accidence and entering into Propria quae Maribus, etc., and also Tully his second epistle, among those gathered by Sternius, and Corderius' dialogues etc." The hours of study were long too. An old record says that from March till September "the child is to come at 6 in the morning and be at school till 11. Again at 1 and tarry till 6. The rest of the year he is to begin in the morning at 7 and leave at 5 in the afternoon. The maister will not Due from approved reserve give leave to play but once a week." The maister was to be "skilled in the Latin and able to teach grammar, oratory, poetry and Greek, as also the principles of Hebrew. He is to be of u wise, sociable and loving disposition, not hasty or furious, nor of ill example. He shall discern the nature of every child, if such may be discerned."
